PART II. DESCRIPTION OF CURRICULUM CHANGE

ITEM 2: A. SUMMARY OF CHANGES

The major change, in conformity with IUP's Spring Hill Report, is the strengthening of the history track from a mere fifteen semester hours to a virtual academic major of 27 semester hours! Further, all courses required of history majors will be taken by secondary social studies teacher certification candidates. It is believed that this significant change places IUP's history education program among the strongest in the nation in terms of subject matter concentration.

Other changes also are of importance. Meeting head-on the requirements of the two key accrediting agencies--the Pennsylvania Department of Education and NCATE--the social science distribution has been both broadened and deepened. Heretofore, students in all secondary social studies tracks merely were asked to take two courses in each of the non-concentration areas, along with one history-social science elective. Generally, students opted for a package of 100-level courses to meet this requirement! The proposed distribution permits only four of ten social science distribution courses at the 100-level. Now, as many as three courses may be at the 200-level and as many as four at the 300-level. Also, since secondary social studies certificate holders are permitted to teach psychology, two courses will be required in that discipline. Otherwise, the six hours per field pertaining in the former program are retained by the new one.

ITEM 2: B. RATIONALE/JUSTIFICATION

A number of considerations indicate both the traditional and current centrality of history in the secondary school social studies curriculum. Moreover, these very same factors militate in favor of a vastly strengthened history education program at colleges and universities generally. This proposed secondary social studies teacher certification program for IUP is a concerted attempt to address the following:

1. History has been, by far, the dominant subject of secondary social studies instruction in schools throughout the nation during the past century. History, as a carrier of civics and geography, continually has been asked to fulfill public education's primary missions: acculturation, socialization, and citizenship education. Nothing has changed. IUP teacher certification candidates in secondary social studies must be well versed in history and its teaching methodology.

2. Three national commissions have pronounced strongly in favor of the strengthening history's traditional and central place in the secondary social studies programs of this country. By the way, a recent royal commission in Britain did likewise. Also, recent conversations with Japanese and Dutch secondary social studies educators indicate similar strengthening of history in the curricula of those nations.
3. California, one of the nation's flagship education states, recently instituted a profoundly history-based statewide K-12 social studies program. As publishers revise their offerings and wend their ways to the lucrative California market, the influence of the Golden State's initiatives on behalf of history will be felt nationally. Earlier, in another significant social studies curriculum overhaul, New York state strengthened and enriched the central position of history in its schools.
4. Texas, long a dominant influence in the school text trade, has never veered, swerved, nor varied from a traditional emphasis upon history in the secondary social studies program. This centrality of history in the Texas schools has a permeating impact on textbooks throughout the United States.
5. In Pennsylvania, the 1959 school law is clear: there will be between grades seven and twelve four semesters of United States and Pennsylvania history and government. Beyond that, it is up to the State Board of Education. The Board's regulations are less than explicit, driving us to common practice in order to get any idea of what actually happens in secondary social studies. The latest Pennsylvania Department of Education tally on what supposedly takes place in the Commonwealth's secondary social studies program, gathered in 1984-85 in a manner that insiders say would make the Gallup organization blush, reveals something like the following pattern of history courses among the 501 school districts:

Seventh Grade	--	World History	247
		World Geography	93
		U.S. History	32
		General Social Science	2
Eighth Grade	--	U.S. History	283
		World History	48
		PA History/Geography	45
		PA History	30
		West. Civ./Geography	24

Ninth Grade	--	U.S. History	256
		World History	84
		PA History	70
		West. Civ./Geography	10
Tenth Grade	--	U.S. History	260
		World History	23
		PA History	2
Eleventh Grade	--	U.S. History	280
		World History	209
Twelfth Grade	--	No history Reported

Other secondary social studies offerings include, in descending order of occurrence.

Civics and Problems of Democracy	348
Economics	235
Sociology	130
Psychology	103
History electives	97
Geography	20
Anthropology	18

Granted that the figures are dated and may be faulted owing to research method; nonetheless, it is clear that history is by far the most evident subject in secondary social studies in Pennsylvania's secondary schools. Clearly, there is a need to provide thorough and proper training in history education to those who seek social studies certification in the Commonwealth.

6. While PDE personnel admit that the data above tell little about district-based secondary social studies scope and sequence, they nonetheless feel that -- to the extent that there are social studies job opportunities -- they will require background and ability to teach history. It should be noted that government/POD, sociology, economics, anthropology, and, to a large extent, geography are staffed by senior faculty with next in seniority usually perched to descend upon these courses as retirements occur. Therefore, the change for a newly minted certificate holder to teach these subjects may be minimized. But they will teach history!
7. It is, therefore, not surprising that the composers of the National Teacher Examination take all the foregoing into account. Exit interviews with IUP's takers of the NTE social studies test since the 1989-1990 academic year reveal the important position history items occupy. Please, this would not pass muster with the Gallup organization! It is an informal survey.

	Fall 1989	Spring 1990	Fall 1990
AN	8%	10%	3%
EC	4%	10%	4%
GE	8%	6%	10%
HI	72%	34%	60%
PC	0%	3%	0%
PS	0%	15%	10%
SO	8%	10%	3%
Methods	0%	12%	10%
TOTAL	100%	100%	100%

Loathe though we are to "teach to test," nonetheless, we bear some responsibility to help ensure that our graduates become certified. Certainly, it would seem, strong preparation in history should enhance a student's chances for success on the NTE. In this connection, it should be pointed out that IUP graduates concentrating in non-history areas, but with QPAs 3.5 and above, have had to take the social studies test as many as three times to pass! That ought not be. Recent discussion with a member of an NTS committee charged to "revise" the NTE social studies test indicates that it has been largely determined that roughly 60% of future editions of this exam will remain history.

8. IUP's Spring Hill Commission strongly urges formation of teacher education programs centering upon academic majors.
9. The secondary-level history education proposal meets all standards of the Pennsylvania Department of Education and the National Council for the Social Studies guidelines used by NCATE. Please see attached statements of these guidelines and standards. There are two sets of each, one evaluating the current program and the other assessing this proposed program.

National tradition, current reform trends, long-standing practice in Pennsylvania, NTE social studies item distribution, and our own university's special commission urgings all militate in the direction of instituting a strong history education program. That's where the jobs will be, if the projected retirements begin to occur, the positions are continued, and the lines of "permanent subs" are not too long. IUP history education graduates of the proposed program will be among the best prepared in the United States and, possibly, the very best prepared in Pennsylvania.

In addition to all of the above, it must be pointed out that the present IUP secondary social studies teacher certification plan probably would not pass under current accreditation guidelines of the Pennsylvania Department of Education and NCATE. The following documents indicate the likely status of both current and proposed secondary social studies programs with respect to the accreditation stipulations of both organizations. First are the PDE requirements, second are those of NCATE.

PENNSYLVANIA STANDARDS FOR PROGRAM APPROVAL AND TEACHER CERTIFICATION:

Social Studies

G.L. 7-12

Scope: CS7G 34

Standard I

The program shall require studies in history, economics, comparative economic systems, government, political science, comparative political systems, geography, anthropology, sociology, and social psychology.

1. Present program fails to address: comparative economic systems, comparative political systems, and social psychology.
2. Proposed program meets this standard:

HI 27 sh
EC 121
EC 350, Comparative Economic Systems
PS 111
PS 280 or PS 285, Comparative Political Systems
GE 6 sh
AN 110
SO Options
PC 330, Social Psychology

Standard II

The program shall require concentrated studies in one of the social studies areas.

1. Present program requires only a 15 sh concentration which can be met with five courses at 100-200 levels in four of six concentrations.
2. Proposed program meets this standard: HI -- 27 sh.

Standard III

The program shall require studies of cross-cultural and global perspectives of concepts in several areas of social studies.

1. May occur in present program; however, loose structure allows avoidance of these issues.
2. Proposed program meets this standard:

HI 201, HI 202, HI (third world course), HI 480
AN 110
SO Options
PS 280 or PS 285
EC 350
GE 230

Standard IV

The program shall require studies of and experience in historical and social science research methods.

1. Most unlikely this standard is met by current program owing to courses at 100-level used almost exclusively to meet requirements.
2. Proposed program meets this standard:

HI 200, HI 203, HI 480
All 300-level or higher courses
HI -- 12 sh
PC 330
EC 350
GE 230

Standard 7

The program shall require studies that promote the examination of the values of a democratic society and the comparison of these values to those of divergent societies.

1. May occur in current program, but can be avoided due to flacidity of requirements.
2. Proposed program meets this standard:

PS 111 and PS 280 or PS 285
EC 121 and EC 350
GE 230
AN 100
SO Options
AN 110

Standard 7.

The program shall require studies which integrate knowledge from history and the social sciences to identify individual rights and responsibilities as citizens of the local, state, national, and world communities.

1. Unmet by current program.
2. Proposed program meets this standard:

HI 480

Standard VII

The program shall require studies of human rights in a multi-ethnic, plural world and the role of race, nation, gender, and age in society.

1. May be met by current program, but can be avoided owing to loose structure.
2. Proposed program meets this standard:

PS 111 and PS 280 or PS 285
SO Options
PC 330
HI 203
HI 480
GE 230
AN 110

Standard VIII

The program shall require studies of contemporary domestic and foreign affairs, including controversial issues.

1. May be met, but could be avoided due to loose structure of current program.

2. Proposed program meets this standard:

EC 121 and EC 350
PS 111 and PS 280 or PS 285
GE 230
HI 202
HI 203
HI 480
AN 110

Standard IX

The program shall require studies of the social studies curriculum regulations and of contemporary social studies trends.

1. This standard is met by current program.

2. Proposed program meets this standard:

HI 480
ED 455

Standard X

The program shall require professional studies distributed over the areas defined in General Standard XIV. The student teaching experience should require the candidate to demonstrate competency in these areas.

1. This standard is met by current program.

2. Proposed program effects no change in current program.

CURRENT PROGRAM

Guidelines and Matrix
BASIC PROGRAMS IN TEACHING SOCIAL STUDIES IN THE SECONDARY SCHOOL

Social studies teachers must have experienced meaningful collegiate instruction that enables them to develop to the maximum potential both as generally well-educated human beings and as fully competent professionals. Therefore, institutions that recommend the certification of their graduates as social studies teachers should provide them with intellectually stimulating and practically appropriate instruction at the basic level in the following areas: general education, history, social sciences, and professional education.

History concentrates (15 sh) have no fields specified; nor do concentrates in social sciences who take 6 sh of history.
1.3 United States government and political science.	Political Science concentrates meet this guideline; however, current requirements do not assure that other concentrates meet them. No pass.
1.4 Economics.	Pass. Usually, EC 212 and EC 122 are taken. 6 sh of EC are required.
1.5 Geography, world geography, and cultures.	Questionable, since cultural geography is not required of concentrates and non-concentrates are unrestricted.
1.6 The behavioral sciences: anthropology, psychology, and sociology.	Pass.
2 Courses that include cross-cultural perspectives; gender studies are strongly recommended.	Might not pass, because there is no assurance students will select courses developing the themes, except AN.
3 Course or courses that focus on methodology of the discipline.	Would not pass; four of six concentrations can be met with 100 and 200-level courses; all distributions met with 100-level courses. Item is not interpreted to mean teaching methods.
4 Courses that include problem solving, critical thinking, and application skills.	Response to #3 applies equally here. Other than instructor discretion, there is no assurance, given the excessive number of 100 and 200-level courses, that current program would pass.

ITEM 2: E. LIST OF DELETED COURSES

Such a list is impossible of compilation, owing to the rather laissez faire nature of the old program. Quite a number of all-time student favorites at the 100-level no longer can be used. However, it would be impossible to compile a definitive list of courses effectively deleted by the promulgation of this proposed program.

ITEM 2: F. HOW THE PROPOSED PROGRAM WILL IMPACT STUDENTS

The most highly valued impact of the proposed program upon students will be the substantially enhanced command of content they will possess as a consequence of its history major and tightening of social science distribution to meet accreditation requirements. Clearly, IUP secondary social science teaching certificates will hold increased value, leading to better employment chances for our students in what has been traditionally an over-crowded field.

More than mere mastery of content or easing of job-seeking, this proposed program most likely will raise the self-esteem of secondary social studies certification candidates by associating them more profoundly with colleagues in their teaching field. Perhaps, the somewhat typical view of students preparing to teach secondary school as being of second class might be altered toward a more complete equality of academic and professional socialization. For teacher preparation candidates.

In more coldly practical terms, the proposed program eliminates the considerable range of student choices endemic to the former curriculum. However, since student choice most often generated a litany of 100-level survey courses anyhow--no loss! Free electives are reduced in the proposed program. PDE and NCATE accreditation requirements are not altogether alike, yet both sets must be met. Meeting both PDE and NCATE stipulations within a 124 sh program virtually eliminates free electives.

HI: History
Department of History
College of Humanities and Social Sciences

- HI 101 History of Civilization I 3c-0l-3sh
 Survey course, presenting in various forms the origin and development of Western man's major political, social, economic, religious, and intellectual institutions to approximately 1600 A.D.
- HI 102 History of Civilization II 3c-0l-3sh
 Survey of man's development from 1600 A.D. to present, in which economic, political, social, and intellectual trends are discussed.
- HI 103 History of the United States and Pennsylvania I 3c-0l-3sh
 Survey of American history from colonization to 1865, with attention to Pennsylvania, colonial foundations, emergence of Federal Union, political and social reform, and controversy over sectionalism and slavery.
- HI 104 History of the United States and Pennsylvania II 3c-0l-3sh
 Survey of history of the United States and Pennsylvania since 1865, with emphasis on major economic, political, and social trends and development of American culture. Also considered is the role of America in world affairs.
- HI 112 History Satellites 1c-0l-1sh
 A variety of topics from Civilization which, when combined with a two-credit History of Civilization II (HI102), will fulfill a requirement in the Social Science package in General Education. Additional HI112 credits may be used as electives.
- HI 195 History: The Modern Era 3c-0l-3sh
 This course interprets the development of two centers of civilization, Europe and America, within a global context and extends from at least the Age of the Enlightenment through the present.
- HI 200 Introduction to History 1/3c-0l-1/3sh
 For history majors and concentrators. Topics include philosophy of history, important schools of history and historians, and methods of historical research. Student is encouraged to become a better historian and to identify with historical profession.
- HI 210 Ancient Civilization: The Middle East and the Eastern Mediterranean 3c-0l-3sh
 An examination of the development and the spread of ancient civilization in ancient Middle East and the Eastern Mediterranean. Topics of study will include the characteristics of civilization and the development of political, social, economic, and cultural institutions in the river valley centers and the diffusion to the fringe areas.

February 7, 1991

SUBJECT: B.S. in Ed. Secondary History Education

TO: John Larner

FROM: Liberal Studies Committee

At our February 7, 1991, meeting we approved your request for History Education majors to consider the sequence HI 202 and HI 203 as fulfilling the Humanities: History category in place of the usual HI 195. This will make the Education program match the B.A. program in the department.
