Ways to Make Advising Experiences Meaningful!

Advisors are an important part of a student's persistence and graduation. Students that develop a relationship with their advisor are more likely to continue their studies and earn a degree – especially those without a personal support network to help them navigate college. The development of a strong system of student support can make the task of advising rewarding for both the faculty advisor and the student. Here are some important points to keep in mind as the fall advising season begins:

- In order for students to make good decisions they need accurate and timely information. Having the most up-to-date information about degree requirements and liberal studies offerings is vital. Providing this information electronically for students is a wise option – direct them to online resources at your department websites, DegreeWorks, and MyIUP. Combined, each of these tools will provide current course offerings and degree audit overviews.
- Helping students to align course selections with their future career goals provides direction that can be mapped over several semesters. Utilize the resources available at the Career and Professional Development Center to take advantage of out-of-class experiences that may further define their career goals. Use the Career Planner in the SSC Advisor Platform to help students see pathways that might not have been considered.
- Knowing how to navigate the university's resources is an important tool for advisors to have in their advising folder. Visit the ASC@IUP website as a first stop to find resources and contacts for offices and programs in support of student success.
- Finally, engage students in the dialogue about their academic success, making connections to the university. Taking the opportunity to build a relationship and celebrate student achievements connects the student to your department and provide them with a strong foundation to become successful alumni!

Support for advising Student-Athletes

The IUP Crimson Hawks Compliance Office has provided an overview of important points related to academic advising and our student-athletes. There are over 475 student-athletes attending IUP this fall, many of whom continue to have success both in the classroom and on the field. Checkout the advising resource located on the ASC@IUP website, advising student athletes.

October Tip for using the SSC Advisor Platform

Do you have a group of students that you would like to add to your Watch List in the Advisor Platform? Here is an easy way to upload the list – create a spreadsheet that contains student Banner IDs, save it as a “.csv” file, open the SSC Advisor Platform and select the Upload to Watch List link. The Upload to Watch List feature only uses student Banner IDs to identify students, so you should remove all other columns. Look for FAQs on the SSC Advisor Platform front page.

Two new programs approved for Fall 2017
