Career Opportunities:

The General Management track emphasizes the achievement of organized goals through the efforts of organization members, preparing you for a leadership role in the competitive world of business. Your Bachelor of Science degree in Management prepares you for diverse and rewarding careers in a wide variety of businesses and industries in public, private, and non-profit sectors. The US Bureau of Labor Statistics projects that employment in management occupations will grow faster than the average for all occupations generating up to 550,000 new jobs from 2019-2029! (www.bls.gov/ooh/management/home.htm)

Program Features:

Leaders are good decision makers. They know how to evaluate ideas, take action, and organize other people to make plans work. As a management major pursuing the General Management track at Indiana University of Pennsylvania, you'll come to know your decision to enroll in the Eberly College of Business and Information Technology was an excellent choice.

Student Organizations:

Student organizations and corporate internships provide students with hands-on application and referenceable experiences. Student-led organizations such as the Management Association, Association for Supply Chain Management, Society for Human Resource Management among many others, allow students to participate in plant tours, network with business leaders and connect the classroom to the day to day business world.

Experiential Learning:

Management faculty bring the business world to the classroom. Your management classes emphasize emerging theories that respond to our changing business world, as well as the practical reality of the day to day business. Core classes in Management, Marketing, Finance, Accounting, and MIS form a strong business foundation, while advanced classes on topics such as supply chain, quality, and human resource management add the depth and expertise that employers demand. For-credit internship opportunities also contribute to a high-level of experiential learning.

Additional Comments:

The Eberly College of Business and Information Technology provides all students with a sound business core that emphasizes financial, analytical, and behavioral aspects of business. The Management major emphasizes the quantitative, qualitative, and human aspects of effective business management and leadership.
